COMMENT OF THE DAY

Frustrating

NOTHING is more frustrating and exasperating in this water-starved Colony of Hongkong than to see water running to waste from capacity-laden reservoirs. It is probable that the comprehensive explanation of this paradox made yesterday by a spokesman of the Water Authority will not satisfy everybody, yet in all fairness it must be acknowledged that the Colony's present-day water situation could hardly have been anticipated by earlier Administrations. When the Jubilee Reservoir was completed in the middle thirties it was genuinely believed that Hongkong had solved its water supply problem for all time. At the time storage capacity, filtration plant and reserve facilities were adequate not only for the existing population, but for a tolerable increase in water consumers. The factors which threw all this away are well known and today some sympathy can be felt for the Water Authority in his predicament of trying to supply a community that has swollen to two and a half million people with the fresh water they need.

By far the most irritating feature of the water supply problem is the inadequacy of filtering facilities, and while the official explanation that any major undertaking to improve filtration at the various reservoirs would be prohibitively costly must be accepted, this offers no consolation to the knowledge that if more filtering could be accomplished, there could be a substantial increase in the daily amount of water available to the public. That a slight improvement in this direction will materialise from additional filtration plant being installed at the Kowloon and Typhoon reservoirs is to be welcomed, but it is obvious that until the Tai Lam Chung Valley project is completed, Hongkong must continue to forgo normal water supplies, whether or not the reservoirs are full to overflowing. The official assurance has been made that Tai Lam Chung will enable the Colony to enjoy a 24-hour water service throughout the year, but in view of past experience, anyone will be forgiven if he regards that promise with some scepticism.

Former Egyptian Premier On High Treason Charges

PLOTS AGAINST THE STATE

Goes On Trial Tomorrow

Cairo, Sept. 24.

An Egyptian ex-Premier, Ibrahim Abdel Hady, will face trial by the Egyptian Revolutionary Tribunal on charges of "high treason," a spokesman of the Revolution Council said tonight.

The indictment accused Hady of having "contacted foreign circles" this year, "plotted against the security of the state and endangered the new regime."

It was served to him in the foreigners' prison here in Cairo.

Hady's trial will begin on Saturday.

Hady was arrested four days ago in a roundup staged, it was said, in connection with the coming "traitors" trial. He was previously arrested a year ago and held for three months.

He held several Cabinet posts under King Farouk and was Prime Minister from December 1948 until July 1949 when he resigned to become one of the opposition leaders in Parliament. Shortly after a stir was caused in Parliament when it was disclosed that he had a bodyguard of 188 men.

He was a delegate to the 1945 San Francisco conference to found the United Nations, and visited Hollywood.

The Revolutionary Tribunal, presided over by Wing Commander Abdel Latif Boughdady, the Minister of War and Marine, was set up two weeks ago to try "traitors to the regime," and is empowered to impose punishments including the death sentence.—Reuter.

Tribal Chief Attacked By Mau Mau Terrorist

Nairobi, Sept. 24.

A terrorist today attacked Wakamba set or chief, Kasina Ndo, with a panga chopping knife severing his wrist and slashing his neck and stomach.

Reports reaching the police here said the attack against the 60-year-old chief—the first on a Wakamba tribal elder since the Mau Mau emergency broke out nearly a year ago—was made by a member of his own tribal location, which lies about 100 miles east of here.

The chief, who was without his normal bodyguard, was slashed in full view of about 40 other Wakamba tribesmen, none of whom raised a hand to help him or to prevent the assailant's escape.

The attacker, who police said was a Mau Mau member, seized the chief's shotgun before fleeing. All 40 tribesmen near the chief when he was cut down were arrested.

Police headquarters here said the chief had recently received a letter threatening his life. Chief Kasina Ndo is "one of the most progressive and enlightened African chiefs in the Colony," a senior Government official said tonight. He had visited Britain several times and at least once since the war.

The Kitui district on the Wakamba reserve, where the attack occurred, lies on the borders of the Kikuyu tribal country. Recently there have been signs of Mau Mau infiltration into the area in search of food and recruits.

A Mau Mau threat to shoot all Africans seen riding on Nairobi buses led to a complete boycott of all bus services to African locations today.

Three services running at ten minute intervals were withdrawn because of a complete lack of passengers.—Reuter.

Will Be Classified As Deserters

Washington, Sept. 24.

The Defence Department disclosed today that American prisoners of war in Korea who refuse to be repatriated probably would be classified as deserters and it indicated action might be taken against others who turned "progressive."—United Press.

Indonesian Soldiers Desert

Djakarta, Sept. 24.

Eighty-seven Indonesian Army men under the command of Lieutenant Ibrahim Saleh have deserted their posts in the Tapanuli area of North Sumatra, apparently to join the insurgents in Aceh, according to reports from Aneta News Agency reaching Djakarta from Medan tonight.

The deserters were of Acheen origin. Taking with them all the firearms of their company, they drove in Army trucks to Kotajane, in the heart of South Aceh.

Information Minister F.L. Tobing, in a nationwide broadcast tonight, appealed to the whole nation to remain calm and to assist the Government where possible to carry out its tasks.

Referring to recent attacks by armed gangs at police and Army posts in several places in Aceh, the Minister said Government instruments had taken strong measures against the insurgents.

The Government has the situation under control, he added.

In the meantime, Vice Chairman of the Provisional Parliament Dr. Tambunan suggested the Government to appeal to the Vice President, Dr. Mohammad Hatta, whose prestige in Aceh has always been very great, to visit the area to help find a solution for the difficulties there.

Not only European employees of estates in Aceh, but also a number of officials together with their families, have evacuated to Medan, the capital city of North Sumatra, according to press reports reaching Djakarta.

Two vessels from Lhokseumawe, on Aceh's northeast coast, arrived in Medan harbour yesterday with men, women and children from Aceh.

According to other reports from Aceh, the insurgents are being led by former Republican Military Governor of Aceh Teuko Daud Beureuh.

A letter found on an arrested courier of Kartosuwirjo, who has his headquarters in West Java, reportedly revealed Daud Beureuh had been appointed "the Islamic State" Army Commander for Aceh.—Reuter.

Thousands Visit Britain

London, Sept. 24.

Over 818,000 overseas travellers visited Britain between January and August this year and a record of 800,000 are expected by the year's end, it was announced today. It was expected that tourist earnings would reach £125,000,000.—China Mail Special.

Inquiry Into Death Sentence Story

JUDGES QUERIED

(From ARTHUR COOK)

Teheran, Sept. 24.

An official inquiry started at Teheran army headquarters today to find out how the news of Mossadegh's death sentence leaked.

Four army judges and two official writers have already been questioned but the inquiry has been ordered to include every officer, typist and man who could have had any access to information on the trial.

Only newspaper in the world to carry the original report of the sentence was the Daily Express. This story was flashed back to Teheran and every newspaper here knew of the sentence. Only quick Government action stopped the story being spread across every newspaper's headlines.

For the Government is not sure if the time is right for an announcement which may stir more riots all over Persia.

Today Radio Teheran continued the systematic campaign against Mossadegh and demanded the death sentence but still the Communists Tudeh Party, which would join the pro-Mossadegh men in any uprising, are causing great concern.

Today several more Tudeh arms caches were uncovered in various parts of Teheran and the keeper of the Military Academy's arms store was arrested as a Tudeh supporter.

At Rasht, 300 miles north of Teheran, police swooped on a Tudeh meeting in a private house and the Reds, when finding themselves surrounded, opened fire.

One Tudeh supporter was killed and seven wounded in the small battle which followed. The Communist newspaper Maardom is still being circulated in large numbers. Six thousand copies of yesterday's issue were discovered when police swooped on a Teheran house today.—London Express Service.

MOSSADEGH'S DEFEAT

Teheran, Sept. 24. The Teheran newspaper, Keyhan, said today that ex-Premier Mohammad Mossadegh, under arrest since his regime was overthrown last month, alternately argued and kept firm silence during a nine-hour interrogation at Saltanabad prison near here.

The independent evening paper said he had tried to appear "calm and cool" during the questioning.

Keyhan, quoting "informed Army judicial sources," said Dr. Mossadegh had told a questioner that he was "doubtful" about the authenticity of the Shah's decree ousting him from the office of Premier.

He had denied that he intended to depose the Shah and that he instructed Persian diplomats abroad to ignore the monarch. He blamed his Foreign Minister, Dr. Hussein Enteshari, for the orders to diplomats.

At other times during the questioning, Keyhan reported, Dr. Mossadegh refused to answer questions, and declared: "I will express my views in court."—Reuter.

Rita Hayworth Married Again

Las Vegas, Sept. 24.

Rita Hayworth was married today to crooner Dick Haymes, her fourth husband, in a hotel ceremony as well as photographed and staged as a movie scene.

Only 10 guests were invited to the wedding in a private room of the swank Sands Hotel in this busy gambling resort, while a small army of newsmen and television cameramen, photographers and reporters recorded the entire event.

Rita, nervous as a first-time bride in her simple blue linen dress, said her fourth "I do" while facing a battery of 16 cameras and floodlights. Judge Frank Macombee conducted the civil ceremony reading from a microphone as movie cameras whizzed away.—United Press.

ITALIAN TROOP MOVEMENTS

Belgrade, Sept. 24.

Tanjung, the official Yugoslav news agency, reported today that more Italian troops had arrived in the Yugoslav border area in the past few days.

(Yugoslavia has protested several times against Italian troop movements in the frontier area since the Italian-Yugoslav dispute over the border city of Trieste flared up a month ago).—Reuter.

Lord Salisbury Accused Of Reversing British Policy

London, Sept. 24.

A left-wing Labour member of Parliament tonight accused the Marquess of Salisbury, Acting Foreign Secretary, of "reversing British policy towards (Communist) China's representation at the United Nations."

The MP, Mr. Desmond Donnelly, speaking at Newcastle-under-Lyme, Central England, said he "had information" to this effect, adding: "It is now the intention to support Chiang Kai-shek's (Nationalist leader) envoy indefinitely."

Mr. Donnelly added: "It is an exceedingly grave matter that such decisions can be taken behind the back of the British Parliament when it is not sitting and be instigated by a remote individual who is not answerable to the elected representatives of the nation. This is something that no House of Commons worth its salt will tolerate for one minute."

He added that he would ask for a statement "on Lord Salisbury's activities" when the House of Commons meets again next month after the summer recess.

The Foreign Office declined formal comment on Mr. Donnelly's statements but diplomatic quarters said there has been no recent change in British policy towards the question of Communist China's seat at the United Nations.

Russian People Not Told

Washington, Sept. 24.

The State Department said today the Soviet Union had not told the Russian people about an offer by the United States, Britain and France to discuss German and Austrian problems at a meeting of the big four foreign ministers.

The Department's spokesman, Mr. Lincoln White, said a study of the Soviet press and radio showed that "not a single word" about the offer, contained in a Western note of September 2, had been mentioned.

The three-power note proposed a meeting of foreign ministers in Lugano, Switzerland, on October 15.—Reuter.

FOREIGN POLICY DRAFTED

Council Of Europe & Big Four Talks

Strasbourg, Sept. 24. The Council of Europe's key Political Committee tonight backed the Western powers' proposal for an early Big Four conference, which would give priority to finding ways to settle the German and Austrian problems.

But the Committee rejected a proposal from British Socialists which urged the postponement of plans to return West Germany until at least one more attempt had been made to reach agreement with Russia over Germany.

Meeting behind closed doors, the Committee sat all day drafting a "European foreign policy" acceptable to the Council's full Parliamentary Assembly.

An authoritative source said the resolution called simply for a Four-Power meeting, ignoring the differences raised during the Assembly's four-day debate on whether the conference should be at the "top level" as proposed by the British Premier, Sir Winston Churchill, last May.

The Committee did not adopt the proposal of M. Paul Henri Spaak, former Belgian Socialist Prime Minister, whose report was the basis for the Assembly debate on a demilitarised zone on both sides of the "Iron Curtain."

The Assembly will vote on the resolution on Saturday when it winds up the current session. —Reuter.

POLICE HUNT IN VAIN

London, Sept. 24. There was still no trace today of William Pettit, whom police believe could assist in inquiries into the murder of Mrs. Ronald Brown, of Kent, who was found stabbed at Chislehurst 15 days ago.

Plainclothesmen are on duty at all points in town where it was thought he might reappear, while two plainclothesmen have been posted outside Mrs. Brown's flat.

The dead woman's husband, Mr. Arthur Brown, 62, believes Pettit's first move will be to contact him by phone. —China Mail Special.

Lord Swinton Off On Tour Of Empire Countries

London, Sept. 24. Lord Swinton, Commonwealth Relations Secretary, left London by air today on a three-month tour of New Zealand, Australia, India, Pakistan and Ceylon.

The Minister will arrive in India on November 14 and in Pakistan on November 19. He will reach Colombo from Karachi on November 23, and return to London on December 1.

Lord Swinton will first visit New Zealand from September 30 to October 14 and then go to Australia, where he will remain until November 13.

Lord Swinton, Deputy Leader of the House of Lords, is visiting all these Commonwealth nations at the personal invitation of their Prime Ministers.

Before leaving London airport by a Comet jet airliner for Singapore, Lord Swinton said:

Defences To Be Tested In Scandinavia

Copenhagen, Sept. 25. A series of mock air attacks lasting six days will begin today, launched by a "hostile" power against Denmark and Norway to test their Air Forces.

About 400 planes from five North Atlantic Treaty Organisation countries will take part — Norway and Denmark, Britain, the United States and Canada.

The exercise is known as "Heads Up."

Simultaneously in the NATO "Mariner" exercise, convoys from Britain will try to reach both Denmark and Norway and return.

These exercises are separate, although some aircraft will take part in both.

Salazar Expected To Retain Office For Some Time

Lisbon, Sept. 24. With Portugal starting a sweeping new six-year development plan, all indications are that Prime Minister Oliveira Salazar will retain for some time to come the national leadership he has held for 21 successive years.

There have been conjectures and rumours in the past that the 64-year-old former economics professor might soon retire from the Premiership. They have always proved to be without foundation.

There has, of course, been talk, but nothing official, of who may be eventual successor to Dr Salazar.

Possible candidates mentioned in informed circles include Dr Joao da Costa Leite, 50, who has a high cabinet position as Minister of the Presidency, and Dr Marcelo Caetano, 47, President of the Corporate Chamber or "lower house" of Portugal's parliamentary system. They are both considered firm supporters of the policies of Dr Salazar.

The sole Portuguese organisation in informed circles include Dr Joao da Costa Leite, 50, who has a high cabinet position as Minister of the Presidency, and Dr Marcelo Caetano, 47, President of the Corporate Chamber or "lower house" of Portugal's parliamentary system. They are both considered firm supporters of the policies of Dr Salazar.

The scattered opposition front is loosely, if at all, organised and includes some of the men in power before the present regime came into being 25 years ago, following an army revolution.

NO INDICATION

Thus what opposition there is to the regime tends to be composed largely of men getting along in years.

General Norton de Matos, who opposed the Government candidate in the opening campaign of the 1949 presidential election, is 68 years old.

Dr Antonio Sergio de Sousa, once considered a leading force in opposing circles, and one-time administrator and minister in earlier regimes, is nearly 70.

There is no indication here that any opposition forces could make a comeback, in the framework of present conditions at least, should Dr Salazar retire from office.

By and large, the main in the street appears satisfied with the way things are going and shows no serious interest in a change. —United Press.

Malan Puts The Blame On Nehru

Capetown, Sept. 24. Dr Daniel Malan, the South African Prime Minister, said today that Mr Nehru, the Indian Prime Minister, was the only obstacle to an agreement on problems affecting the Indian population in South Africa.

Relief Agencies In S. Korea At Sixes And Sevens

Seoul, Sept. 25.

Relief teams, now facing the very considerable task of reconstruction in South Korea, fear that shortage of funds, a multiplicity of different agencies, and clashing interests may seriously delay rehabilitation.

While in North Korea the Communists are proclaiming that major reconstruction schemes are already in progress, both South Korea and the United Nations are facing their task with apparently inadequate resources.

A recent joint survey by the South Korean Government and the United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency showed that 80 per cent of South Korea's industry, communications, housing and educational facilities were wrecked by the war.

The agency found that help amounting to 1,750,000,000 dollars (about £300,000,000) is needed to restore the country and stabilise Korea's economy.

The total amount of foreign aid pledged by the end of August this year was about 450,000,000 dollars. Only 150,000,000 dollars has actually been paid.

South Korean officials and the United Nations workers who have been waiting years for the full scale programme to begin, now feel that real reconstruction of the country seems as far away as real peace in Korea.

They declare that the free world now faces stiff competition from the Communists in restoring the Korean peninsula. And, they add, the indications are that the Communists do not intend to lose the battle of reconstruction in Korea.

The Communist radio in North Korea is already talking in broadcasts about a large scale project for rebuilding Wonsan harbour and two large factories in Wonsan city.

U.S. ARGUMENT The Board recently reached an impasse over the use of 200,000,000-dollar emergency relief fund approved by President Eisenhower and the 50,000,000-dollar Civil Relief in Korea fund. South Korea asked that 70 per cent of the fund should be spent for long-range subjects while the United States claimed that the fund should be used for immediate relief.

The United States proposed that South Korea use most of 250,000,000 dollars for procuring essential materials which would be sold for Korean Hwan, the local currency. The Hwan would be deposited in a special account.

The special account would be able to meet labour costs, finance running expenses of long-range reconstruction projects and procurement within the country without adding to the inflationary pressure, it was argued.

After a number of meetings both sides agreed to spend 75,000,000 dollars for purchasing materials needed immediately. But they failed to agree where to order the materials. The United States wanted to purchase a large percentage of the materials from Japan, while South Korea is opposed to this.

Currency rehabilitation is regarded as urgent. The South Korean Government has a 43,000,000,000-Hwan budget deficit, and the currency's purchasing value is down to less than 1/20th of its immediate post-war value. —China Mail Special.

Security Council Meeting

Conference Called By Eisenhower

Washington, Sept. 24. The National Security Council held a three-hour meeting today and was reported to have discussed the defence of the American continent in the hydrogen bomb era.

The session of the Council, the United States top strategy-planning body, was secret and there was no word about what decisions, if any, were reached.

President Eisenhower summoned an unusually large number of his Government aides and advisers to today's meeting.

Normally fewer than a dozen people attend the weekly meeting. But today 26 names were listed in addition to that of the President, who serves as the Council's Chairman.

DEAN'S WARNING

Meanwhile, a Wentworth-by-the-Sea, New Hampshire, Mr. Gordon Dean, retired Chairman of the United States Atomic Energy Commission, said that within a year or two, Russia would be able virtually to "destroy us if she moves first."

Time is "running out," Mr. Dean said.

Mr. Dean said the very great problem of 1953-1954 was "Can we as a nation, and can the nations of the now free world permit the Soviet to reach the position where, if it chooses, it can completely annihilate this country?"

"Time and the unwillingness of the free world to stop the clock combine to give her this power," he said in an address prepared for delivery at the annual meeting of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers and the Northern Textile Association.—Reuter.

Reds Release Engineer

Vienna, Sept. 24. The Soviet occupation authorities have released an Austrian engineer, Josef Heger, who was reported to have been kidnapped last March, the Austrian news agency APA reported today.

Heger, handed over for release to the Austrian police by the Soviet Commandant in Baden, near Vienna on September 16, refused to give any information to the Austrian authorities about the reasons for his arrest, the agency said.

Heger, a former official of the extreme right-wing League of Independents, had later joined the Communist-affiliated National League Party.—Reuter.

Lessening Tension In World But Cold War

CARDINAL SPELLMAN'S DENIAL

New York, Sept. 24. Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, today denounced rigorously the trial in Warsaw of Bishop Kaczmarek, condemned this week to 12 years' imprisonment.

The Bishop was alleged to have sent secret information to the United States through Cardinal Spellman.

The Cardinal said he had never even heard the name of Bishop Kaczmarek before his trial.

"It was," he said, "a mockery and a parody of justice and the verdict was absurd and cruel."

Those responsible, said the Cardinal, would in their world of Communist contradiction, one day receive themselves their own punishment for what are barbarous and shameful crimes.—France-Press.

Churchill Gives Reception

Pole Explains His Reasons For Requesting Asylum

Washington, Sept. 24. Dr. Marek Stanislaw Korowicz, alternate member of the Polish delegation to the United Nations who left his colleagues on September 18 and asked for political asylum in the United States, told a Congressional Committee today his reasons for doing so.

"I knew it was only in the United States that I could serve to the fullest extent the interests of Poland," he said.

He spoke in French from the witness chair of the Un-American Activities Committee of the House of Representatives, his testimony being relayed to Communist countries by short-wave radio.

Dr. Korowicz said that even before he left Poland, he had decided he would try to escape from the Communists when he reached the United States.

He said he had never been a member of the Communist Party and "no one ever invited me to become a member."

Not more than five or six per cent of his countrymen were members of the Communist Party, Dr. Korowicz added.

Dr. Korowicz told the Committee that the Polish United Nations delegation was under direct Soviet domination.

He was asked by Mr. Gordon Scherer (Republican, Ohio) whether the same situation would exist if Communist China were admitted to the United Nations and replied:

"At the beginning the same state of affairs would prevail. That is my opinion."

Polish politicians and Communist leaders had been stressing in speeches and articles that the direct effect of the admission of Communist China to the United Nations would be to strengthen the Communist bloc in the Security Council, he said.

Dr. Korowicz added: "The Soviet representative would no longer be isolated, but would be accompanied by Communist China. The Soviet bloc would then have two of the five votes instead of only one."—Reuter.

Is Not Over REVIEW BY YUGOSLAV FOREIGN MINISTER

New York, Sept. 24. M. Koca Popovic, the Yugoslav Foreign Secretary, told the United Nations General Assembly today that no positive change of any decisive character had taken place in the relations between Yugoslavia and the countries of the Soviet group.

"This is even more regrettable owing to the fact that relations between these countries and Yugoslavia have been extremely strained for many years," he added.

It was entirely the fault of those States and primarily of the Soviet Government, M. Popovic said.

It was undeniable, he continued, that there had been a lessening of tension in the world, and this could be illustrated by the armistice in Korea.

But he added: "We do not believe that the cold war has ceased and that the signs of lessening of tension have suppressed tension itself, which is still very acute."

It was difficult and impossible to deny the special responsibility of the great powers in the international problems of major importance.

"But if this be the case, the consequences of their errors must prove particularly dangerous."

"Furthermore, in view of the fact that in conflicts between great powers large interests are at stake, these powers cannot be always impartial without the assistance, support and co-operation of other smaller and less powerful nations," M. Popovic said.

"We should see to it that the dangerous tendency of powerful nations solving their disputes at the expense of other interested nations, and without consulting the latter, should not be renewed."

"Such attempts, as we have seen, could only worsen the disequilibrium that they are trying to eliminate; they could only give rise to new increased tensions and breed the seeds of war. The weaker and smaller nations should not be left with the only choice between submission to one great power or another," M. Popovic said.—Reuter.

TREND IN SOVIET Paris, Sept. 24. M. Edvard Kardelj, Yugoslav Deputy Premier, said in an interview published here today that he believed "the forces of progress, favouring Socialist Democracy, will become increasingly strong in the Soviet Union."

"This transformation inside the Soviet Union will take place gradually and we must not expect any spectacular evidence," M. Kardelj said in an interview with the weekly periodical, Express.

"But it must be facilitated from the outside, and that is why a policy for the easing of international tension is necessary, while on the contrary a policy of force and pressure on Russia would strengthen against bureaucratic tendencies, which could lead to the return of Stalinist methods of dictatorship in the name of defending the mother country."

He declared that shortcomings in Soviet economic assistance were the weak spot of Russo-Chinese relations.

"That is why it would be wise for the West to seek to establish normal and active commercial relations with China. China will need large-scale economic co-operation. And it is probable that trade exchanges can lead China to political independence," he said.—Reuter.

PEKING AND UN He was asked by Mr. Gordon Scherer (Republican, Ohio) whether the same situation would exist if Communist China were admitted to the United Nations and replied:

"At the beginning the same state of affairs would prevail. That is my opinion."

Polish politicians and Communist leaders had been stressing in speeches and articles that the direct effect of the admission of Communist China to the United Nations would be to strengthen the Communist bloc in the Security Council, he said.

SHIPS FOR JAPAN Tokyo, Sept. 25. The Japanese Maritime Safety Force (navy) will soon receive two American patrol frigates and three large LSTs under the United States-Japan lend-lease agreement on ships, a spokesman for the National Security Board (Defence Ministry) said.

This will increase the strength of the Japanese Maritime Safety Force to 13 frigates and 50 landing support vessels.

The Force said five more frigates were expected to be delivered by the United States this year.

The Force said the christening ceremony was to be held at Yokosuka naval base next Wednesday.—Reuter.

Mr. M. F. Jayaratne, of Ceylon, thought the GATT should show resiliency and flexibility. If it were to survive by reconciling the interests of many countries.

His Government supported the British request, he said, since the issue was essentially practical and the solution was not in violation of the spirit of GATT.

Opposition to Britain's request came from European countries—principally Italy and Denmark.

Dr. T. Notarangelo, of Italy, declared that the waiver might have substantial repercussions on Italian-British trade relations.

Agricultural products were a considerable part of Italian exports to Britain, he declared, and already as a result of British import restrictions they had fallen from 10.5 billion lire in 1951 to 8.7 billion last year.—Reuter.

U.S. Confidence In World Role Of France & Germany

Washington, Sept. 21. Diplomats here were impressed by evidence in the Secretary of State, Mr. John Foster Dulles' speech that he felt new confidence in both France and Germany and in the prospect of improved free world conditions with their help.

In the case of France he indicated, in his St. Louis speech, that this resulted from the French pledge for the independence of Indo-China.

As regards Germany—U.S. because the electorate so strongly supported Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's programme for "the long-range welfare of a Europe which includes a democratic Germany."

United States officials have long linked the outlook for Indo-China with the security and prosperity of Europe itself since they feel that anything which brings tranquillity to that part of Asia will serve to strengthen France at home and safeguard other European nations.

Thus, Mr. Dulles' new confidence about Indo-China was directly related to Europe in the view of diplomats here.

Mr. Dulles stressed that the French pledge of independence to the Associated States of Indo-China had transformed the entire character of the war there and made it possible for the United States to contribute substantially in money and material with good conscience to the success of the fighting.

Mr. Dulles explained that the French pledge made the Indo-China struggle genuinely "a war of independence," whereas previously some of the local people had been persuaded that their choice was merely between colonialism and Communism.

IN GOOD FAITH The United States has favoured the independence of Asia since the Philippines to become a Republic many years ago.

More recently it helped to encourage the independence of Indonesia.

Thus, when France increased its assurance of freedom for the Indo-China States the United States could more strongly support the defence effort there because it meant fighting for a broad principle for the local people as well as defending them against Communism, Mr. Dulles indicated in effect.

He noted that France was in the process of implementing its declaration and added:

"There is every evidence that they are doing so in complete good faith."—United Press.

BRITISH POLICY London, Sept. 24. Mr. Peter Thorneycroft, President of the Board of Trade, said today that Britain's adverse attitude to the admission of Japan into the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) was "a sensible view in the present circumstances."

Mr. Thorneycroft, who arrived in London by air tonight after attending the GATT meeting in Geneva, said the working party set up to look into the situation would give that view full consideration.—Reuter.

Dr. T. Notarangelo, of Italy, declared that the waiver might have substantial repercussions on Italian-British trade relations.

Red Spies Have A Clear Field In Japan

Tokyo, Sept. 25. Communist spy rings, which the police say are gathering information about United States bases and Japan's embryonic army and navy, work here unimpeded by any anti-espionage law.

The Government is expected soon to take action to correct this situation, but for the time being suspected spies can be prosecuted only under laws with comparatively light penalties.

A Russian, alleged to have been making contact with a spy system here, was recently charged with breaking immigration laws—the only offence of which puzzled prosecutors could accuse him.

Two notable cases of espionage have occurred here since Japan regained her freedom in April 1952.

A radio operator, Masao Mitsuhashi, reported to the police last year that his life was threatened by Communist agents and that he needed police protection.

While police investigated his allegations, Mitsuhashi confessed that he had been employed by Communist agents in Japan transmitting coded messages to Soviet Russia.

In spite of Mitsuhashi's confession, corroborated by other evidence, Japanese legal authorities found that they could not prosecute him for espionage.

HOW MANY MORE? When Mitsuhashi appeared in court, he was tried on a charge of using a radio transmitter without a licence. The court found him guilty and sentenced him to four months' imprisonment.

Mitsuhashi was one of thousands of Japanese who returned home from Siberian prisoners-of-war camps. Police and Government officials wondered how many more of the former prisoners were employed by the Communists as agents.

More recently, a man arrested by police in northern Japan said that he had been trained in an espionage school in Sakhalin and sent to Japan to contact Communist agents.

He added that he was ordered to leave a set of code books in a certain spot where a Communist agent would pick them up. The police checked his story and found a set of books in the place described by the man.

Police waited for the Communist agent to come for the books, but the publicity given to the arrest of the courier must have warned him.

FEARS FELT The man also told the police that Soviet patrol boats would be waiting to pick him up and take him back to Sakhalin.

Police were waiting for the boat when it arrived. Four members of the crew were arrested and the vessel impounded.

Japanese public prosecutors decided to indict only the captain.

These Russians were the first Soviet nationals to be arrested by the Japanese authorities since the war. Many Japanese feared that the Kremlin might retaliate against Japanese prisoners-of-war still detained in Siberian camps.

The vessel's captain was charged with violating Japan's immigration and shipping laws. It found guilty, the maximum penalty would be three years' imprisonment.

In spite of the apparent need for an anti-espionage law, Japanese public opinion was opposed to such legislation.

TO GO AHEAD? Critics said that pre-war and wartime governments had used anti-espionage laws to control the people, and argued that under former laws the public were allowed to praise the forces but were forbidden to criticize.

A man could be arrested and imprisoned, they declared, for an indefinite period without trial for causing "disunity in the nation and undermining the war effort." If he criticised the army.

The governments and military, they stated, had sometimes used the espionage law for disunity.

Talks It Over With President Washington, Sept. 24. General John E. Hull, soon to become United Nations Commander in the Far East, discussed his new assignment with President Eisenhower at breakfast today.

Losing Its Original Identity? New York, Sept. 24. An article in the New York Times said today that the United States Point Four programme of technical aid to foreign countries "is fast becoming an instrument of America's 'cold war' policy."

The article, by the Times Washington correspondent, Paul Kennedy, added: "Its original identity and purpose are being absorbed in one way or another into the United States military assistance programme and the counter-offensive against Communist encroachment, which the aid represents."

The article said that technical assistance experts, who had been with the Technical Co-operation Agency since its inception, were convinced that the amalgamation of the Agency with the Mutual Security Agency into the Foreign Operations Administration was the beginning of the end for Point Four as it was conceived.

The Batory's Captain Reveals The Ship's Secrets THE EVIL GENIUS WHO ORGANISED THE SPIES

The climax of seven years of sensational stories about the Polish liner Batory came when her master, Captain Jan Cwiklinsky, escaped from his Communist-dominated ship and sought asylum in Britain.

In his story which he is telling exclusively for the China Mail the captain has revealed that the ship's crew contains a network of spies and informers controlled by Peter Szmielek, political security officer.

But the evil genius of Batory is security officer Major Zebrowski, in Gdynia, her home port. He had his suspicions about Captain Cwiklinsky and set spies to watch him.

I went down to see him and faced his smooth smile and evasive eyes. Why had he dismissed the girl?
"But captain, she hasn't been dismissed, you know. It's just that she's wanted in a court case here in Gdynia, and you'll be sailing before it comes up."
I went back and asked the woman if this was so. She said it was the first she had heard of it. So back again to Zebrowski who grinned at me and said lightly: "Oh, that's nothing.
She hasn't had the summons
yet."

Night Steward

I DIDN'T believe him, and I beat him down in argument.
He let me have the woman's trip, but when we returned she was dismissed, of course, but that's a small obstacle for a good spy. When I realised that I was under observation I arranged the documents in the drawers such a way as to make the slightest interference with them apparent.

When next I looked at them I saw that they had been disturbed.
Obvious Spying
WHENEVER passengers were guests in my quarters my steward showed a solicitous interest in our welfare, hovering about us, never really leaving us alone together.

I expected this rather obvious spying, of course, and I was intrigued one day when I realised that it had more or less stopped.
I did not believe that Szmielek or Kaminski now considered me above suspicion, that wasn't in character at all. I suspected that somehow I must still be under observation while I was in my quarters. I became convinced of it after I met one of the Line's directors in Gdynia.
He idly repeated to me an innocent remark I had made to a passenger when I thought we were alone in my cabin.

The director may or may not have been giving me an oblique warning, but it put me on my guard. The next time a visitor came to my quarters I listened carefully for any sound from the wireless-room next door, where Kaminski had one of his spies.

Sure enough there was a slight movement of furniture against the wall. I noticed a similar noise on successive occasions when visitors came. I realised now what had happened.

This realisation was confirmed when a crew member came to me later on ship's business and in the middle of it, silently mouthed the words: "There's a microphone in this cabin. They are listening to us."

Constant Strain

THE strain of living under conditions like this is indescribable. I was innocent of any crime against the Polish State, and it did not help my peace of mind to realise that Zebrowski was indifferent to get rid of me and would contrive or distort the most innocent of incidents to build up a case against me.
I could not comfort myself by saying: "At least, I command the Batory. I am her master."
Too often did I have to listen to the decisions of the Party Secretariat and the Union, and to run the ship as they wished.
There was that occasion on the India run, just after we left Gibraltar, when the leaders of the Party and Union came to me and told me that they wanted the ship to get to Gdynia a day earlier than schedule.

They did not tell me why. I was not a member of the Party and therefore did not warrant such confidence. I told them the suggestion was impossible. To accelerate the schedule would cost the line something like £2,000. It would mean that passengers would arrive in Southampton on Sunday instead of Monday. How about their schedule?
"It is necessary to speed up,"
I was told.
"I can't do it without permission from Gdynia."
"Very well, captain, we'll go permitted from Gdynia."
And they got it, too. Within the hour came the message from the company's headquarters:
"Speed up."

the Union's "agitators" paid particular attention to what was said at these meetings by the ordinary rank-and-file.

Two or three times a voyage
there would be a general meeting in the first-class dining-room for the whole ship's company. And then even I shouted my "Hurrah!" in approval of the cry: "Long live the Soviet Union!"

There was a desperate note in this political instruction, Szmielek, Kaminski, Major Zebrowski (and whoever gave the Major his orders) were fighting a losing battle against disillusion. These lectures, with the threats and the punishments that lay behind them, were their methods of quarantining against desertion.

But they did not stop it.
Young men leapt overboard in New York, swimming to freedom with nothing more than the bathing-trunks they were wearing. They walked ashore in Southampton and Highbury-on-Tyne, trusting in the liberality of the British people.

The ship is not allowed in port until the UB men and the Frontier Guard have come aboard. Their officers have an immediate half-hour's conference with Szmielek and Kaminski while the guards station themselves on every deck.

Then they go through the ship from masthead to keel. The crew are meanwhile locked up in the dining-room for as long as three hours. If necessary, they and their belongings are carefully searched. The UB men are looking for pamphlets, leaflets, books, magazines, newspapers from the West.

Any seaman unlucky enough to be found in possession of this sort of thing gets a reprimand and a black mark on his record.
Second offenders are dismissed the service.

The guards stay aboard the ship all the time she is in port.
There is a strict check of identity cards at the gangway for all coming aboard or going ashore, even if they pass the guard ten times in as many minutes.

Crew's Problems

AND I never knew whether I was going to leave Gdynia with the same crew as I had when I arrived. On Zebrowski's whim
I might suddenly be told that a third of my officers and crew would be replaced. It seemed that the major did not like us to get to know each other too well.

If I had my problems, so did the crew. Eighty per cent of them were nominal members of the Party, but I doubt whether more than five per cent were convinced Communists.

The rest, however, had to submit to the regime.
For educational purposes (education, that is in Marxism, Leninism and Stalinism) they were divided into divisions.
Members of each division attended regular weekly meetings at which they listened to instructional lectures from Szmielek or Kaminski.

They were under obligation to be attentive. They were under obligation to speak their piece after the lecture and make it plain that they were as fanatic in the cause of the Communist world as the next man. The

WHY ARE NEGROES FASTER?

The Explanation Is Not Ethnologic

New York, Sept. 24.

Is there any special reason why Negroes should dominate the shorter flat footraces in the Olympics?

George Meade, writing in the monthly U.S. Amateur Athletic Union magazine, notes that of 16 gold medals in the 100 Metres, 200 Metres, 400 Metres and 800 Metres races in the 1932-36-48-52 Olympics, American negroes won 10.

Two more of the 16 races went to negroes from other nations (George Rhoden and Arthur Wint, both of Jamaica). In all, 48 medals were distributed in these 16 races and 32 of them went to members of the Negro race.

Meade then poses the question which many others have asked: "Why should such a small segment of the population provide such a large proportion of high-class performers?"

"Some anthropologists have indicated a racial difference in the comparative lengths of the leg bone and the foot structure, but it is difficult to believe that anatomical differences are the principal reason," wrote Meade.

"With such widely differing types among the group of champions as the short and stocky Eddie Tolan, the large and rangy Ralph Meade, and the extremely thin Jesse Owens, minor differences in bone structure would hardly seem to be the determining factor. Perhaps the explanation is sociologic rather than ethnologic."

Meade noted that track was one of the first sports to accept negroes on an equal footing with whites and the first Negro successes have attracted more Negro athletes until "the trend of the 20s became the standard of the 30s." Certain colleges or countries produce champions in specialized groups, he noted.

"No one would claim that Finns are racially better fitted for throwing the javelin than Swedes are automatically better mile runners," he said. "Exam-

SCOTS MAY PLAY AT LORD'S

Edinburgh, Sept. 24.

Nobody can explain why cricket has not played a more prominent part in Scottish sporting life when remembering the fervency with which the fans follow football.

Perhaps they think the game is too "slow," yet the same could be said of England where, nevertheless, cricket can raise outsiders to a pitch of excitement very near that of a big soccer game. For this witness the way the thousands of spectators acted when England won the Ashes this year.

Perhaps the time will come when Scotland can really play a big part in the cricket life of Britain and there are certainly enthusiasts in the country who live for that day.

The visit there of touring sides, which have completed their engagements in England, always proves popular, even if the fixtures are not regarded as "first class."

The two matches played by the Australians there in recent days have shown that there is some very fine talent among the cricketers of Scotland and the Marylebone Cricket Club, "hopes" of the game in England, have, it seems, realised this.

For the first time in history they are to invite Scotland to play on the hallowed turf at Lord's, headquarters of the game, next summer.

It is perhaps a sign of the growing strength of the game there that the Scottish authorities are inclined to accept if the MCC will promise to send a team for a return fixture to Scotland and will not oppose Scotland with second class teams. They want the best that England can field or nothing—China Mail Special.

Colonel's Warning

San Francisco, Sept. 24. Colonel Frank Schwable, an American Marine who, while a prisoner of the Communists "confessed" that the United Nations used germ warfare in Korea, has declared here that the days of the Geneva Convention governing interrogation of prisoners of war, have gone for ever.

"The enemy has no respect for truth."

"We are up against a propaganda team and had better learn to fight," he told a Press conference on his return from Korea yesterday.

He said months of interrogation and solitary imprisonment forced him to "confess."

"I was utterly exhausted physically and mentally. It seemed the situation was absolutely hopeless. I was positively convinced I would never leave unless I confessed."

RUSSIAN COMPLAINT

London, Sept. 24. In a commentary in English broadcast by Moscow Radio today, Boris Leontyev, the well-known Soviet commentator, complained that "influential circles in the United States and the big press have stepped up the atomic hysteria."

Referring to last Friday's Soviet news agency announcement of Soviet atom bomb tests, he accused the American press of suppressing or minimising the following statement:

"As long as responsible quarters in the United States decline the instant proposals made by the Soviet Union to outlaw atomic weapons, the Soviet Union is compelled by the demands of security to give attention to the production of atomic weapons."

"At the same time the Soviet Union will continue to pursue a policy of building up peace between nations, seeking agreement with other countries for the unconditional prohibition of atomic, hydrogen and other weapons of mass annihilation."

Leontyev said governing quarters in the United States will refuse to agree to a bill. — China Mail Special.

Women Standing In Syrian Elections For The First Time

Damascus, Sept. 24. Syrian women, for the first time in the country's history, will stand as candidates for election to the 82-seat Parliament on October 8. But they have little chance of success.

Candidates so far nominated number 312 and of these five are women.

The Syrian President, Brigadier-General Adib Shishakli, granted women full political rights last July under the new constitution when he cancelled the law which allowed educated women only to vote but not to stand for Parliament.

Two licensed political parties, Socialist Nationalist and Progressive Socialist, are taking part in the elections but three former parties, the People's Party, the Nationalist Party and the Co-operative Socialists, have boycotted them as being against the regime.

The majority of the candidates are standing for the Arab liberation movement, founded last year by President Shishakli. President Shishakli dissolved Syria's last Parliament after seizing power in a bloodless military coup d'etat in December, 1951.

ARMY'S FLEDGE
The following year, all political parties were banned. The military authorities pledged themselves to govern the country until the civilian leaders could be "entrusted with power."

A decree issued a fortnight ago fixed the number of seats in the coming Parliament at 82, including four for tribesmen and nine for non-Muslims.

The number of seats in the previous Parliament was 114. Under the new constitution, the President of the Republic will exercise executive powers while the Chamber of Deputies (Parliament) will wield legislative power.

Syrian women were first allowed to vote in the General Assembly elections in 1949.

EMBASSY AWAITING ORDERS American-Japanese Negotiations

Tokyo, Sept. 24.

An American Embassy spokesman said today that American negotiators were awaiting instructions from Washington before reopening talks on a revised administrative agreement between the United States and Japan.

The spokesman was commenting on a Reuters story from Washington that the United States had agreed to grant Japan full criminal jurisdiction over the United States garrison forces in Japan.

He said that the results of a series of informal talks which had been held recently between American and Japanese negotiators had been sent to Washington, and the Embassy was now awaiting further instructions.

Foreign Minister Katsuo Okazaki told a press conference last week that the question of criminal jurisdiction was not responsible for holding up negotiations.

Mr. Okazaki implied that general agreement had been reached on the jurisdiction question, but that technical details of drafting and other complex legal problems were holding up the agreement.

The American spokesman said today that the Embassy expected a series of formal conferences to be held before the final revised agreement was concluded.

CONCERN IN SINGAPORE

Singapore, Sept. 24. News of the armed revolt in North Sumatra is causing nervous concern to traders here. A trade source said Malaya imports hotel, tools, copra and tobacco from North Sumatra which is a centre for barter trade before banking facilities were introduced late in 1951. Chinese traders here especially have sizable trade connections with Atjeh and Nias Island and are watching developments closely. One trader, commenting on the news of the revolt, said it was too early to make an assessment of the situation and local traders are content to adopt a "wait and see" attitude. Meanwhile the Indonesian Consul-General, Dr. Mohammed Razif, is on a visit to Penang, North Malaya, to collect "facts" on trade between Malaya and Indonesia. He told newsmen he was in Penang especially to establish friendship and to institute a policy of good neighbourliness. If the facts gathered there on trade were favourable they would be forwarded to his Government in Djakarta. Dr. Razif will play host at a cocktail party to Government officials and prominent businessmen on Friday before returning to Singapore. This is the Consul-General's first visit to Penang since his appointment here more than two years ago.—United Press.

French Budget Decision

Paris, Sept. 24. France will budget 10,000 million francs less in the next financial year than in the current one. The Finance Minister, M. Edgar Faure, said France's 1954 budget would be for about 3,000,000 million francs. This year's total expenditure of 3,814,000 million francs is 100,000 million francs lower than the figure budgeted for last year.—Reuter.

Sugar Prices In America

New York, Sept. 24. World sugar No. 4 closed today unchanged to two points lower with sales of 331 contracts. Domestic sugar futures No. 6 closed unchanged to three points higher with sales of 144 contracts. Scattered selling in world contracts followed following basis in raw market. Domestic contracts held steady as traders expected developments in threatened month-end strike of dock workers. Futures prices closed as follows:

Turn-Round Problems At Ports: Need For Large Drydocks

Direct Taxation Burden

From the Sunderland shipyard of Sir James Laing and Sons, Ltd., the cargo liner Somersby (2,200 tons deadweight) was launched for Sir H. Rogers and Co. (Management), Ltd., Darnley, Scot. She will be one of the fastest ships to be constructed by Messrs Laing, her speed being 18 knots on a six-cylinder Doxford type engine to be supplied by R. and W. Hawthorn, Leslie and Co., Ltd. The Somersby is the first cargo liner to be built by Messrs Laing since 1950, when they completed the Daley and Deepdock for the same owners. Speaking after the launch, Sir Leonard, managing representative of the shipbuilders and his own firm who were present, said he believed that quite soon shipowners would be facing a difficult time, and it would be impossible to keep old ships at sea at all. Only very efficient ships would be able to earn a profit. Sir Leonard also gave a warning that the British Merchant Marine would not be able to maintain its leading position if the burden of direct taxation remained so high when foreign competitors escaped lightly. "Sooner or later some change of the Exchequer, and I hope it will be Mr. Butler, will realize that the British Merchant Marine is falling behind. It is of interest not only to shipowners and shipbuilders, but the whole nation that we should realize in an adequate Mercantile Marine."

DELIVERY DATES
Sir Leonard said that the Somersby was the fifth ship built by Messrs. Laing for his company, and there were three more on order. That total of eight vessels represented not an inconsiderable fleet in itself, and showed the real confidence which existed between Messrs. Laing and Messrs. Rogers. He added that the time must come soon, however, when owners would give a firm price and a firm delivery date for the vessels which they desired to order.

The Somersby had been designed as the fastest ship in their fleet, and it was gratifying to be able to acknowledge that the ship built by Messrs. Laing invariably achieved the performance, and were sometimes better than the specifications under which they were built. The vessel will join two other vessels built by Messrs. Laing, the Daley and the Deepdock, plying in their liner service across the Atlantic to Florida and United States ports on the Gulf of Mexico.

"Our bookings of general cargo are increasing fast, and in co-operation with Messrs. Laing we have planned and already provided passenger accommodation which sets new standards of comfort for ships of this size engaged in this trade. We believe and certainly hope that the comfort provided in this new ship will exceed even that provided in the two vessels already in service."

Slow Day On Wall Street

New York, Sept. 24. The stock market finished the same way as it started today's session by showing evenly divided most fractional price changes either side of Wednesday's closing. The Dow Jones industrial average was up 1/16 and utilities 2/16, but rails showed a loss of 2/16. Turnover for the day was 1,020,000 shares. Among the most active stocks today were Studobaker, which closed at 22 1/2, a drop of 1/2, and General Motors which at 55 1/4 showed a gain of 1/4. Total stocks dealt in was 1,090, of which 403 issues advanced, 248 declined and 239 showed no changes.

Some quarters said the current interruption did not necessarily mean termination of the stock market's recovery from the 1952 low since technically it could conceivably carry further.—China Mail Special.

Need for greater drydocking and berthing facilities on the River Clyde was referred to by Mr A. F. Hull, chairman and managing director of the Ellerman Lines, when he spoke at the annual inspection of the Clyde Navigation Trustees harbours and works. Mr Hull referred to his connection with the City Line, which had traded to and from Glasgow for well over a century. He pointed out that when that company began its shipping operations the range of quays and wharves had been only three-quarters of a mile, and the annual revenue about £30,000. Today, there were 12 1/2 miles of quay with a revenue of close on £1,900,000.

There was a story of progressive expansion and improvement, he said, which since the war had been intensified by the expenditure of £2,000,000 and a further projected £2,000,000 for improvements designed to speed the turn-round of ships. As a shipowner he could think of no more laudable aim, for although the world-wide situation had not improved, there was no port which, from their point of view, could be regarded as wholly satisfactory. There had in latter years been rapid stepping-up in the speed of dry dock ships and every effort had been made to make them as efficient as possible, even though the cost had mounted alarmingly, so it was

Lancashire Welcomes E. African Decision

Manchester, Sept. 24. British cotton textile exporters welcomed the announcement from Nairobi yesterday about arrangements for the entry of Japanese textiles into East Africa. The announcement had ended the uncertainty which exporters say has been interfering for some time with trade between Britain and East African territories. Comment on the announcement has been made by Mr A. D. Campbell, who led the British cotton export team, which visited East Africa this summer.

The practical meaning of the official language of the East African Community, the East African Community, was that restrictions on imports of Japanese goods, which hitherto have been in force only up to the end of 1953, were continued unaltered until May 1, 1954.

After that date two categories of Japanese goods—namely kilts and unbleached sheetings—would be allowed entry under open general licence. But a decision was reserved about all other types of Japanese goods. Decisions on what is to happen in May next year will presumably depend largely on what the British cotton industry can offer.

"Lancashire mills and Manchester exporters must do everything to convince the British and East African Governments of the adequacy of supplies from Lancashire before the time for this decision arrives," Mr Campbell said.

Manchester exporters say the two categories of Japanese goods being allowed into East Africa from May are not those in which the British textile industry had much interest. The effect on their trade will scarcely be noticed. With the earlier announced priority for the backlog of British textiles caused by the congestion at Mombasa, the arrangements for Japanese goods are considered to have given the British cotton textile industry an opportunity to maintain a valuable export trade.—China Mail Special.

JOHN CLARKE'S CASEBOOK

The Pace Is Killing

THE pace of life on the Mediterranean island of Sicily comes from does not, to strangers, seem excessive for much of his type. In the fields, men and women fight their long battle with the island's grudging soil. But in the towns, Eduardo's sort, back for most of the stifling day in the shade at street corners or in cafes, doing nothing more energetic than leading half a hopeful ear to the lottery results loudspeakers pour out endlessly into the dusty air.

Why Eduardo should have left the island to come here, a mystery. Perhaps he grew tired of constantly having to move to dodge the sun, or perhaps had heard of such tourist attractions as public assistance.

HOSPITALITY
He came, at any rate, five years ago, a lean, bronzed man with a pencil line of moustache and dark, restless eyes, who quickly learned how to qualify for an allowance from the State.

Instinctively, Eduardo adopted Pica-dilly Circus and the streets around it as his headquarters here, and was welcomed and put wise to ways of augmenting his income without resorting to work.

Shortly after his arrival full hospitality was extended to him. He was sent to prison for loitering with intent to steal from parked cars.

Other prison sentences followed as he absorbed more of the Pica-dilly Circus way of life and ineptly tried to put the tips he picked up into practice.

NOTA CULPA
The other day, Eduardo was arrested again, and again charged at Bow Street with being a suspected person loitering with intent to steal from cars—in Leicester Square, this time.

He half-closed his eyes until they became small points, slit-like, and curled his lip like a stage brigand and said disdainfully: "Not guilty."

The story of the police watch on Eduardo was told to Mr. Bertram Reese, the magistrate. He had been seen to tamper with the door-handles of three cars, all of which had suitcases inside.

"You say I touch 10 cars?" Eduardo demanded ferociously of the policeman giving evidence. "SEE A FRIEND."

"No, I said three cars," said Eduardo, triumphantly. Then it was his turn in the witness-box. "What are you by occupation?" the learned clerk asked him.

Eduardo thought for a moment. "Kitchen porter," he said, and added, as if to convince himself, "thass right, kitchen porter."

"When did you last work?" the magistrate unkindly asked. "About... or..." But Eduardo suddenly thought better than to submit to such an inquisition. "I tell you 'bout yesterday," he said.

OUR AUSTRALIAN NEWSLETTER

He's Always Managing To Get In The News!

FROM H. KING WOOD

Sydney, Sept. 22.

It is some months now since Reginald Aubrey Doyle was sent along for 10 years for one of the coolest frauds in our history, but so widespread were his activities around the city that seldom a week goes by without his name getting a good spot in the papers.

But this week he has been in the news a little more than usual.

It was revealed that it was only by last-minute juggling that his name was scratched from the list of those who were to receive the Coronation Medal.

Two warders at Long Bay gaol have been sacked following the discovery of £15 in a rubbish bin in Doyle's cell. Doyle himself is to come before a visiting magistrate to explain the presence of this money.

And what police call "sensational" developments are expected in a few days about an alleged horse-doping gang—the beans about which were said to have been split by Doyle after his arrest.

It can be said that never has one man caused so much worry to so many as our friend Aubrey Doyle.

An advertising stunt of a city store this week held up traffic. It consisted of a pair of legs jutting from a background into the window, advertising women's stockings.

What attracted the crowd was the discovery that the legs were real.

RELIABILITY TRIAL
The firm that sponsored the 6,500-mile car reliability trial—the last of the competitors struggled in this week—must be wondering if the game is worth a candle.

The trial—from Sydney to Brisbane, to Townsville, down to Mt. Isa, on to Darwin, across to Alice Springs, south to Adelaide, then Melbourne and Sydney, was a great success inasmuch as 192 cars of all types and style entered for the £1,000 prize, but caused trouble for the world "go."

Many members of the public complained about the record traffic snarl the trial caused in the city the Sunday afternoon it began; at every city on the route competitors complained bitterly about the alleged actions of the fellow competitors; leaders in the trial along outback stretches were accused of turning sign-posts the wrong way (one car went 186 miles off its course) and generally there was plenty of unhappiness.

At Darwin some competitors had serious check over the cars of other drivers whom they accused of not obeying by the rules; at Adelaide there was a mass protest about some drivers; at Melbourne another mass protest against the adding to the alleged actions of the fellow competitors; leaders in the trial along outback stretches were accused of turning sign-posts the wrong way (one car went 186 miles off its course) and generally there was plenty of unhappiness.

Quarrelling Among Lepers At Hay Ling Chau

A number of reports have been circulating in the Colony this week of trouble among the lepers at Hay Ling Chau—the "Isle of Happy Healing."

They were to the effect that some of the Swatow lepers were dissatisfied with their representation on the self-governing Council which the controllers of the leper station have instituted and that quarrels broke out between them and some of the Hakka on the island.

It is also reported that a police post has been set up to prevent further trouble.

Approached this morning on the subject, an official of the Hongkong Auxiliary of the Mission to Lepers issued the following statement:

The leprosy on Hay Ling Chau continues to grow and there are now about 360 patients on the island. Many of these are very sick—others work in the fields and help build roads and cottages. Some of the lepers recently quarrelled among themselves—they are from different parts of China and tempers became rather frayed for a while. Good feeling was however soon restored and the development of the island, under the administration of the Hongkong Auxiliary of the Mission to Lepers, continues apace.

In addition to caring for the residents on the island, the Medical Superintendent, Dr. Neil Fraser, is treating some 200 out-patients at clinics in Hongkong.

Everyone who was unfortunate enough to find himself in Shamshuipo POW camp during the Japanese occupation will find special interest in this narrative of a single-handed escape carried out with great courage and imagination. But this is a book which also holds much wider reader-interest.

The author strikes a minor key in relating his experiences, yet this, if anything, adds to the tense drama and emphasises the remarkable fortitude of a man who, for two and a half years, had remained constant in his determination to escape from imprisonment and who finally permitted no obstacle, no hardship and no test of human endurance to deny realisation of his dream.

Mr. Goodwin goes out of his way to avoid heroics in describing his adventures and his perils, but the stark facts of his escape from Shamshuipo and his tortuous journey across southwest China are sufficient in themselves to convince even the most hardened of readers that he carried out an epic enterprise.

This is a worth-while book in every respect, and one that can be read with deep interest more than once.

Alleged Abortion Trial Continues

Witness Declines To Answer Two Questions

Lee Yu-mui, married woman, another principal witness for the prosecution, this morning declined to answer two questions put to her by Crown Counsel when she gave evidence before Mr. Justice A. D. Scholes at the Criminal Sessions on the fourth day of the trial of four women, three of them sisters, on charges of using instruments and conspiracy to procure abortions.

The four accused women were Cheung Oi-mei, alias Amy Cheung, 26, married woman, Cheung Siu-huen, alias Betty Cheung, 18, student, Cheung Siu-wah, alias Kathryn Cheung, 17, student, and Cheung Kam, 41, amah.

Two other accused women, Wong Man-huen, 50, married woman, and Cheung Wun, 50, business man, who were originally charged with the others, were not before the Court, having absconded before they were due to appear to plead at the August Criminal Sessions. They were the parents of the three Cheung girls on trial.

Mr. R. W. S. Winter, instructed by Mr. Peter H. Sin, appeared for the four accused.

The charges were (a) that the four accused, together with Wong Man-huen and Cheung Wun, allegedly used an instrument or some other unknown means on Wong Yuk-fan on January 28 to procure a miscarriage; (b) that the same four accused, together with Wong Man-huen and Cheung Wun, allegedly used an instrument or some other unknown means on Wong Yuk-fan on January 28 to procure a miscarriage; (c) that the first three accused had, with Wong Man-huen and Cheung Wun, on divers dates between September 12, 1951, and May 30, 1953, conspired to procure abortions.

A jury of six men and one woman was empanelled. JUDGE'S WARNING
Before Lee Yu-mui testified, she was warned by the Judge that she need not answer any question which she thought might incriminate her. During her testimony, she declined to answer two questions put by the Crown Counsel in her examination-in-chief.

Lee testified that she was married and had four children. In May, she suspected that she was pregnant. She then declined to answer Mr. Winter's question as to whether she made then.

She continued that on May 28, she went to the Kowloon Residents' Free Clinic in Nathan Road to see Dr. Wong Man-huen. In the clinic, were the first and second accused. She asked first accused to examine her and was told that she had been pregnant for three months. When she asked the second accused to "do it."

Asked by Mr. Li what second accused was requested to do, witness declined to answer the question. Mr. Winter then objected to the Crown proceeding any further, adding that the witness had indicated she did not wish to answer any question. His submission was over-ruled by the Court.

Witness was then again reminded by the Judge that she need not answer any particular question which might incriminate her.

NO RECEIPT
Witness said that the first accused agreed to "do it" and asked for $300 return and $20 for the hiring of a room. A sum of $40 was paid but no receipt was given.

On the following evening, at 7 p.m., witness returned to the clinic again and was taken to 22A, Austin Road, first floor, by second accused. On arrival, she saw Wong Man-huen and Cheung Wun and was told by Wong to sit inside a room. A short while later, the second accused appeared and received $280, being the balance of $320. No receipt was given.

Witness said, Wong Man-huen then told her to go to another room, where there was a bed, a case containing medicine bottles and a table. The third accused was also present in the room.

Witness then described the alleged operation on her. Hearing of the case is continuing.

H. E. the Governor, under instructions from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, has re-appointed Mr. Alejandro D. Yengo, as Vice-Consul for the Republic of the Philippines at Hongkong, provisionally and pending the issue of Her Majesty's Exequatur.

Resettlement Inspectors
The Chairman of the Urban Council, Mr. Cheung Wing-in, has exercised the powers conferred on him by Rule 2 of the Emergency (Resettlement Areas) General Rules of 1952, has appointed the following to be authorised inspectors for the purpose of the Emergency (Resettlement Areas) General Rules of 1952: Mr. Chu Tuk-ming to be Settlement Officer; Messrs. S. H. Ma, Chan Chuen, Wong Chung-yau, and Tsang Hama to be Area Officers.

Naturalisation Approved
The privilege of British Naturalisation has been conferred on Mr. Cheung Wing-in, Articled Clerk, by H.E. the Governor with the approval of the Secretary of State for the Colonies. (Mr. Cheung has since been admitted to practice as a solicitor).

Mr. Cheung took the Oath of Allegiance on September 4.
